“ Ms Smith..... later to be know as Harriet..... she started driving our school bus, (bus#4) when I was in the second grade. We quickly learned she didn't take no gruff from us youngsters..... but that she was one of the most loving individuals in my childhood. I could always talk to Harriet about whatever I wanted to or needed to, she would always listen and offer her opinion if she thought it necessary, she was smart like that. I remember when the tornado of 82 came through and hit her house, it was important to me that we stop at her house that morning and check on her and Mr Turner, I was so scared until I saw her face and she hugged me tight and assured me she was ok.... She was a constant in my life, even after I graduated school and moved away. When I would come home to visit my folks she was always included in that visit, and She'd normally sit with me for an hour or two and we'd catch up on the Saints or family or whatever.... Everytime I drove by her house, which was everyday, I'd blow the horn, cause she'd always blow when she passed mamas house..... Heaven has definitely gained a good human being and soul. I loved Harriet Smith, and I am a better person for having her in my life.
